As a school student I would see him in the store adding everything up a lot of times in his head but also with the help of his trusty cigarette carton pieces he would write figures on. As I grew up I would see him walking around the neighborhood and even after I moved out of the city I would still run into him from time to time down at the cross street mrkt. Great guy. will be missed. RIP Benny!

I lived a few doors down from Benny for several years, until recently. I always enjoyed chatting with him when we crossed paths while he was out for a walk. He was such a nice man and made me feel welcomed to the neighborhood.

I'd like to share 2 of my fondest memories of a truly wonderful man. The first being, as a young girl my Daddy would take me to The House, as it was lovingly referred to, for a visit with the family. Our first stop after visiting one of my Pop Pop's childhood friends, would be to see my dad's brother, my uncle, Benny. At the store he managed they would catch up on the weeks events as I waited patiently for uncle Benny to address my roaming eyes from one candy counter to the other. He always did, with a smile he would tease me and make me laugh until finally he would give me candy. He would either pick the one that was a wafer that melted in my mouth with little candies inside the wafer or the wax bottles, he knew which ones were my favorite. And the second one, I was a young lady in my early 20's. My mom and dad had taken me to an event at the VFW Post the family belonged to. Being probably the youngest one there I had no one to dance with, of which is still one of my favorite things in life, dance. Uncle Benny seeing how bored I was asked me to dance. I remember him asking me through his chewing gum, as he always did. I remember his mint green shirt under his navy suit and thought how handsome my uncle looked. Afterward I went back to the table to tell my mom and aunt Sally what a wonderful dancer he was. I hope I thanked him for that because he had made an otherwise boring evening not so boring. With all my love and respect, Susan
